Measles Vaccine Matter Cleared

Dr. C. M. Shipp, of the Hancock County Health department, issued a statement this week explaining that serum for measles vaccination is limited and it is necessary to keep an emergency amount on hand for emergency polio cases
later.

The announcement came in answer to a "measles vaccine scare"
which the doctor said had existed
here recently.

"Measles serum is supplied to your family physician, but it protects only allocated supply, this year is limited to babies of one year of age and under and pregnant mothers," he said.

"We would be glad to furnish measles serum to all exposed cases of this disease, but we simply don't have it. We are keeping a limited amount of this serum for emergency cases of polio that we might have and resolutely need later on."

"Polio serum, measles serum
and hepatitis or yellow jaundice serum are all the same but under a different name," he explained.

sionary Society of the Baptist Church, represented by Mrs. Mike

DAWSEY, MITCHELL ARE ACQUITTED OF CATTLE STEALING CHARGES

Russel Dawsey and Herbert Mitchell were found not guilty of cattle theft, after a jury deliberation of 30 minutes, Friday night.

The case opened Thursday morning when District Attorney Boyce Holleman called the prosecution witnesses to the stand to testify.

The main points which Holle-man brought to bring out in his cross examination were the price of the cow killed and allegedly stolen and the fact that the tire tracks of Dawsey's truck allegedly showed the vehicles was parked a short distance from the head and skin of the cow. There were marks on the ground, indicating that something had been dragged to the truck, Holleman said.

The remains of the heifer were found at Blue Corners Well, by Thomas Zengraling, who took care of the cow which belonged to
Mrs. Carl Heitzmann.

The counsel for the defendants, Bidwell Adam from Gulfport, in a series of questions, managed to question the price of the young cow, which was quoted at $40. He also asked the two prosecution witnesses who had found the skin and head why they did not contact Sheriff John Egloff instead of phoning J. Y. Thomas, a special investigator for the cattlemen's association.

Adam asked a question which played an important part in the case for the defense, "Is the reason you did not call Mr. Egloff the $50 reward accompanying any information against cattle thieves who are found guilty?" The witnesses answered, "no," but said
they would not refuse the money
if it was offered to them.

The jury was then excused, and the State presented witnesses to convince the court that the two confessions made by Herbert Dawsey, one to Harlan Dean, and the other to J. Y. Thomas, should be allowed as evidence in the case.

For the first statement Holle-man called Deputy Sheriffs Paul Egloff, Johnny Kachler and Constantino Dean to the stand.

Both Egloff and Kachler stated that Mitchell had given the confession after Dean said, "you just as well come clean and make it easy on yourself." Dean denied making this statement, but due to the testimony of the deputy sheriffs Judge Grant did not allow this confession to be entered on the grounds that leniency was promised Mitchell before he made it.

The next alleged statement of guilt, given to Thomas by Mitchell, was allowed by the Judge, though Bidwell Adam told the court that this "Unholy Document," as he referred to the statement, was all answer and no questions.

Adam called a number of defense witnesses, including Malin
Dawsey, father of one of the accused, and Lawrence Carver, a teen-ager who stayed with the Dawseys.

They testified that they were at Blue Corners Well with Russel
Dawsey on Sunday, February 7,
and while they were there no cow
was killed or stolen. They said they did see one answering the description of the heifer lying in the ditch dead.

They did not deny that the tire tracks were theirs nor the case. They said the tracks were made Sunday when they were there to get the wood.

The defendants were called to the stand and they confirmed the testimony of the other defense witnesses, as to their whereabouts on the day the crime was committed.

Holleman and Adam then gave their final address to the jury. The District Attorney opened with a short talk which he closed by saying, "The distinguished counsel for the defendants, Mr. Bidwell Adam, is a well known orator and when he gives his address to you the lights in this room will blink and the shingles on the roof will shake. But do not let your decision on the verdict be swayed by his masterful speech.
Keep an open mind at all times."

Adam then began his delivery
by saying, "I want to thank my young colleague Boyce Holleman for his compliment. But let me tell you members of the jury I have seen Mr. Holleman present a case many times, and if he ever lets go, the lights in this room won't only blink but they will go out completely and the shingles will not shake but they will fly off the roof."

He won his case. The jury
said "Not guilty."

dancing exhibitions, as well as

Bay St. Louis launched Commu-

throughout Hancock and western Harrison Counties during the past week.

But these coupons also are reprinted in some Sea Coast Echo ads this week for those who misplaced the circular coupon.

Merchants, banded together under the presidency of Henry Oso-nach, decided to launch the bargain days as an invitation to the folks of the area to inspect the quality merchandise in the Bay St. Louis stores.

They feel that by selling merchandise at rock-bottom prices they can make new friends. And that's the point behind the Community Bargain Days.

The bargains run only Friday,
Saturday and Monday. On Tues-

over.

Bay High News

A few seniors attended Mississippi Southern's Career Day. They reported an enjoyable day as well as a profitable one.

Seniors were given occupational guidance recently. Mrs. Webb, who has had special training in occupational guidance, and who is now with the Occupational Placement Bureau at Gulfport, came to Bay High. She talked to the senior class about positions and future plans. She advised each senior who was not going to college to take an aptitude test to give him an idea for an application for future work. This information will be kept on file in the office at Gulfport. Seniors who need placement help, can get this aid from the Gulfport office.

Mrs. Erwin's Home-Making classes attended a Home Demonstration presented at the Gulf Coast Electric building by Miss Robinson, the Home Economist.

This demonstration was the preparing of meats and vegetables for the deep freeze. They also had the opportunity to see many electrical appliances.

Mrs. Erwin and her classes appreciate the privileges of being able to attend this demonstration. They also wish to thank Mr. Shattuck and Miss Robinson.

The big hit of the school entertainment - Apple Blossom Time - three act comedy, Senior play, Friday evening, April 9.

In cooperation with the American Legion, Charles Strong, Donald Strong, August Oliver and Buddy Engelhorn assisted Mr. Gordon Romanoff in painting the safety slogan "Look Alive and Stay Alive" on the sidewalks near the school.

The Girls' Chorus is looking for a man to take the part of Professor Sforzando in the operetta "The Dizzy Baton." The performance is unscheduled because of the scarcity of men. Anyone interested may contact the president of the chorus, Mary Palmer, for further details.

The second grade pupils are enjoying their science study. They are making a collection of insects and leaves, watching some plants grow. By some simple experiments they are learning how water goes into the air.

On April 2, 1954, Miss Saliba's fourth grade will give a chapel program. The name of the play will be "Self-Help." Characters are Denis Tonkel, James Loup and Elizabeth Poolson. Announcer, is Donald Breland.

Gray Lady

Nurses Needed

The Gray Lady organization of Bay St. Louis, which has been conducting a drive for volunteers in the past several weeks, this week urged those able to help to consider the nursing service of their group.

The duties of the volunteer nurse at the Veterans hospital in Gulfport include addressing special day greeting cards for patients, writing personal notes for them, reading to them, playing checkers and card games with the veterans, visiting the patients who have no family or friends, and helping the patients to participate in canteen hours.

The hours for nurses are every day from 10:30 a. m. to 4 p. m.

The announcement this week said the induction course for Gray Ladies will be held at the VA hospital in April. A group from this city will attend.

To volunteer, call Alberta Bay or Mrs. V. J. Piazza.

MOTION BY SUPERVISOR HUBBARD

Motion by Supervisor Hubbard that the Tax Assessment Rolls of 1953 are void for the following reasons:

On Friday, July 18, 1952, with all members of the Board present, the following jurisdictional decisions were deliberately omitted from the minutes by the Clerk of the Board.

"Motion, Jones, Seconded Jack Lott
 Assessment rolls to be raised 100% over roll of previous year.
 Voting yea, Jones, Lott, Kellar
 Voting nea, Hubbard.
 Motion Jones - Seconded by Lott
 Making motion not to increase rolls 100% realizing out of order - wishes to withdraw motion."
 On the latter motion a vote

was never called.
 I claim that since these jurisdictional decisions were omitted from the minutes, in spite of my protest.

Which was ruled out of order by the President of this Board because said motion attempts to contradict and repeal final orders of this board adopted approximately one year ago.

Be it ordered by the Board that the Board recess until Monday morning, June 22nd, 1953, at 9 o'clock A. M.

J. S. SHAW,
 President, Board of Supervisors.

There were present: Frank Kellar, Jack Lott, Johnson Shaw, R. G. Hubbard, Jr., Supervisors; J. A. Egloff, Sheriff of Hancock County; A. C. Mitchell, Clerk of the Board absent and excused.

HOW TO TAKE A SOIL SAMPLE

because you may get unusual soil. Avoid these areas when you take samples; dead furrows, back furrows, terrace channels, windbreaks, snow fences, old fence lines, marshy spots, areas near line rock roads, forest areas, near the boundary between slopes and bottomlands and, of course, where you applied band fertilizer last season.

5 to 10 acres in size. Scrape away surface litter. Then take a small sample of soil from the surface to a depth of about 6 inches (or plow depth) in 15 to 20 spots.

so that you get one composite sample from every 5 to 10 acres. Areas that distinctly differ in crop growth, in the appearance of the soils such as light or dark colored or have had different past management (liming, manuring, fertilizing or cropping), should be sampled separately. as fully as possible so that the soil testing laboratory can give you a detailed report.

so that each single sample is completely mixed with other samples from the same area. Then take out about a half-pint of the soil for testing. Discard the remaining soil where row crops have been planted, take samples between the rows.

if you use a spade. First dig a V-shaped hole to plow depth and remove a 1/2-inch thick slice of soil from one side of the hole. Then trim off from each side of the spade all but a thin ribbon of soil down the center of the spade face. Place this in a clean bucket.

Proper Way To Grow Corn

by HOWARD F. SIMMONS
County Agent

Many farmers are discouraged over the growing of corn because of the last two dry years. Actually, many farmers made good corn last year. Without exception, these farmers who made good corn followed the seven approved practices essential to good corn production during the last two drought years has been the putting of corn on corn land and then following through with the other recommended practices from there.

Many farmers think that they do not have the type of land recommended for corn, but we cannot possibly over-emphasize the fact that if the right land is used along with the other approved practices, we can grow two or three times as much corn as we have normally grown per acre.

The essential steps in corn production are:

1. Put corn on corn land. This means deep, fairly well-drained bottom, terrace or low upland soil. It is important to get the corn located on this type of land.

2. Break the land deep, and thoroughly. On many of the sandy and loam-type soils, a plow sole has been built up over the years by always breaking the land to the same depth. It is well to break the soil about an inch deeper each year until a good, deep soil is made and then drop back to shallow depth and come down again in the same manner year after year.

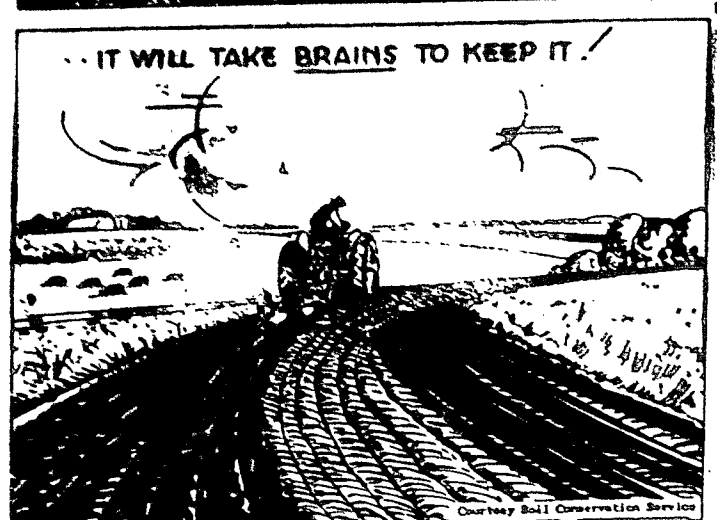

3. Plant thick. Use about 10,000 plants per acre. This is a stalk every 15 to 16 inches per 40 to 42-inch row. If it is exceptionally good, deep, bottom land, 12,000 plants per acre should be used. This is one plant every 13 inches in drill on 40 to 42 inch rows. If shallow upland soil absolutely has been used, plant the corn one stalk every 19 or 20 inches in drill on 40 to 42-inch rows. In general, about two gallons of corn per acre will furnish enough to plant as recommended.

Planting date. Plant on time. Best planting dates for South Mississippi are last of March and

4. Use adapted hybrids or varieties. Adapted hybrids usually produce at least 15 or 25 percent more than open-pollinated varieties. Sometimes the difference is much greater. The recommended varieties for South Mississippi are shown below:

Coker 811, Dixie 17 and 18, Louisiana 521 and Funks G7-37.

5. Fertilize Properly. The best thing to do is to have the soil tested and follow the recommendations. For average soils in this section, use 400 pounds 8-8-8 or 6-8-8, or its equivalent, in other fertilizer mixtures, placed as deep as practical, and side-dress with 60 to 80 pounds of nitrogen per acre when the corn is knee-high. In the case of excellent corn land and there are 2,000 plants per acre, side-dress with 120 to 150 pounds of nitrogen per acre. On the timber land, use only 8,000 plants per year and side-dress with 60 pounds of nitrogen per acre. This is a stalk every 10 to 20 inches on 40-42-inch rows.

6. Keep weeds out. Remember the weeds eat the same plant food that the corn eats. So, if you permit them to grow while the corn is growing, they will use the plant food and water that the corn needs. Where the weeds and grass are bad, little or nothing is left for the corn. Obviously, the corn will suffer.

7. Harvest the corn as soon as practical and treat for weevils. This is important for all varieties of corn but may be more important with certain hybrids than in the case of open-pollinated corn.

This is the year to really do a good job of growing corn. There will be a reduction in acreage in other products and we will need an additional cash crop. Corn can be made a supplement cash crop if it is handled properly.

A. C. P. Assists Practice Of Conservation

The Agricultural Conservation Program is a farm by farm program on which the individual farmer uses cost-sharing provided under ACP to carry out soil and water conservation practices on his own farm.

The farmer himself selects the practices which are needed to meet the conservation needs of his farm. Those who administer the program are farmers who have been elected by their farmer neighbors to serve as ASC committeemen.

C. L. Neill, chairman of the Mississippi Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, says that farmers generally understand the purpose and the groups administration and operation of the Agricultural Conservation Program and that this is indicated by the conservation progress that is being made. He believes, however, that farmers have a further responsibility of keeping the public informed of the objectives of the program and of the progress made.

Continued progress in conservation, Neill believes, depends upon public understanding and public support. The public must know that participation in the ACP is voluntary and the program is open to all farmers. The conservation practices approved by the county ASC committee are designed to cover the most enduring soil and water conservation needs of the farms in the county. When a farmer signs up to cooperate in the ACP, he selects the conservation practice which will help correct the conservation problems on his farm.

To illustrate how the program works, Neill points out that if the acidity of the land in pasture is keeping grass and clover from doing an effective job of holding the soil, the farmer may select liming as one of the conservation practices on an initial improvement basis. If terraces are needed to check erosion and gully on some of his sloping land, the farmer may use the assistance provided under ACP to help in constructing the terraces. If vegetated cover is needed for a particular field then that practice can be requested or if reforestation is needed, the tree planting practice is available. In any event the practice must be approved in advance by the county committee and when completed and accepted, the farmer must still pay his share of the cost.

"In all cases," Neill explains, "it's up to the individual farmer to determine whether he will cooperate in the ACP and to select the practices he will carry out when he does. It's an individual farm program designed to serve all the people maintaining the production potential of our land."

F. A. Loans Help Farmers Balance Program

By Farmers Home Administration The purpose of the Farmers Home Administration is to help farmers obtain sufficient credit to carry on a balanced farm program to provide for the best use of land, labor, livestock and equipment; to help the families carry out their plans and increase their earnings, to pay their debts and increase their standard of living.

The Supervisor of the Farmers Home Administration makes visits, as necessary, to advise and assist them in their planning and making adjustments in their farming operations and in adopting improved farm and home practices, as recommended by the Extension Service and the Soil Conservation Service.

This program of the FHA serves operators of the family type farms who are unable to obtain needed credit to carry on successful farming operations from local banks and other lending agencies the amount of money needed at a reasonable rate of interest.

There are several types of loans made by the FHA but come under two categories (1) Farm Ownership Loans, (2) Production and Substance Loans. Farm Ownership loans are made to enlarge or improve inadequate farms, as well as to buy efficient family type farms. This type of loan requires a deed of trust on the land or farm to be purchased or improved.

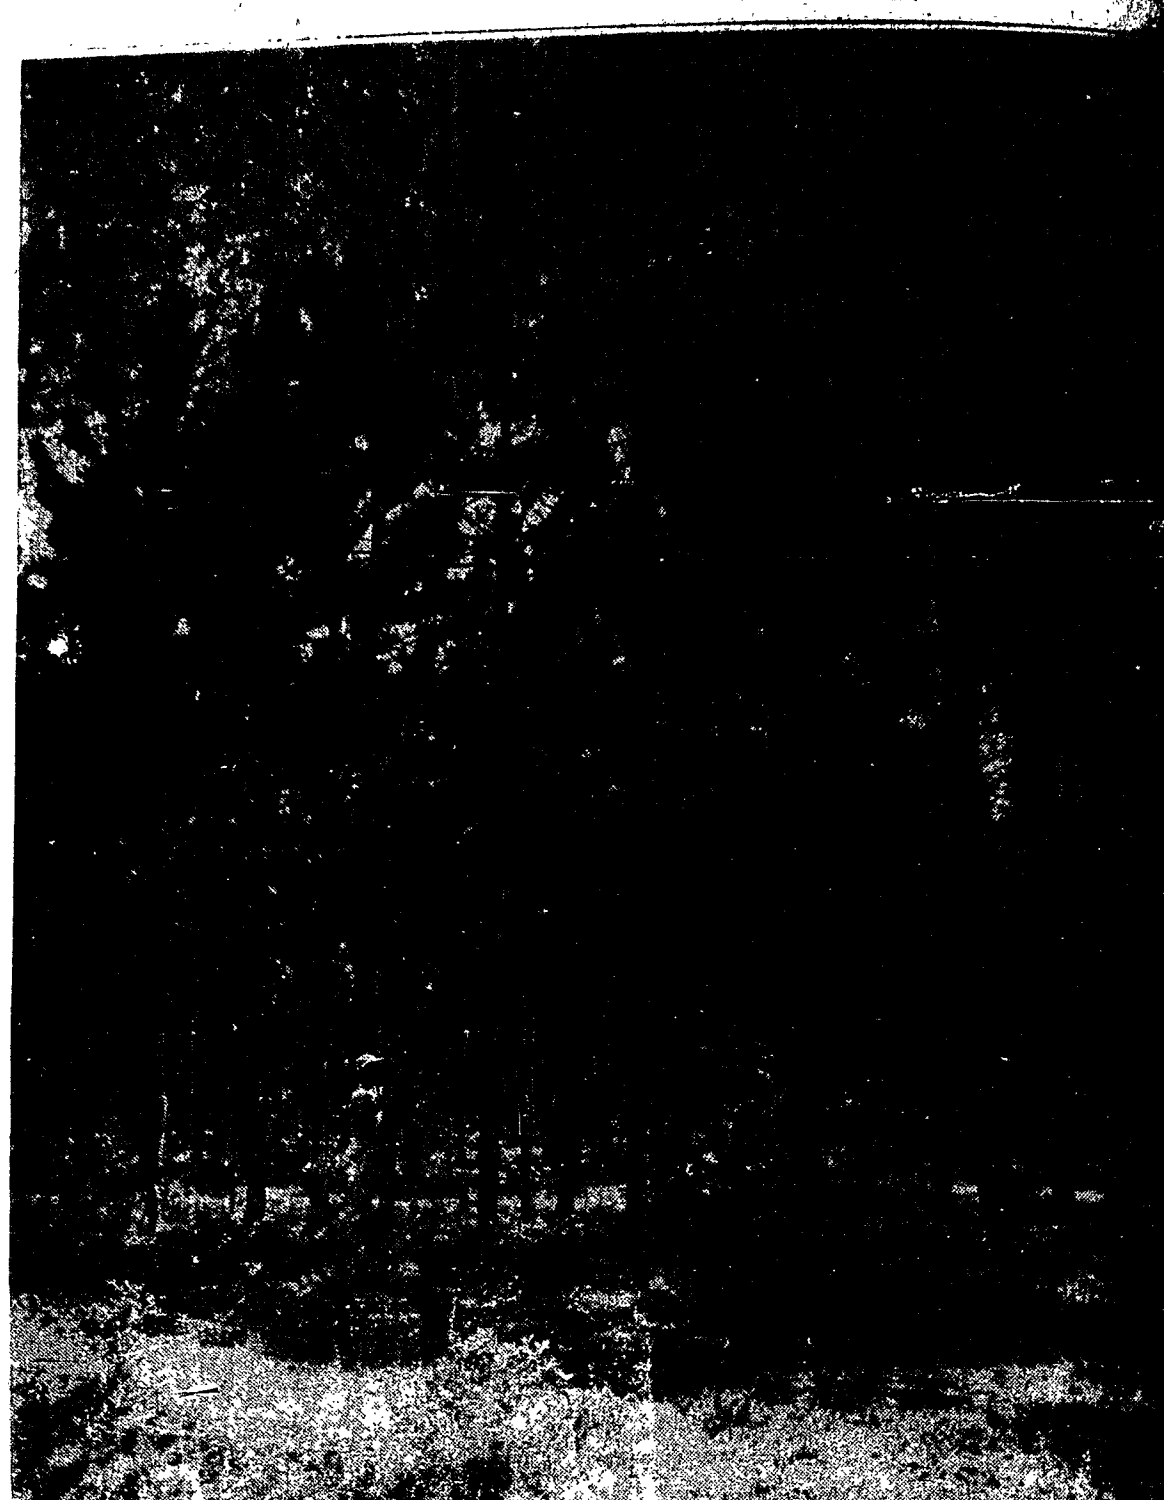

Production or Operating loans are chattel loans and a mortgage is taken on all chattels as security for this type loan. War Veterans with Agricultural experience now have preference on all types of loans made by the Farmers Home Administration.

The Farmers Home Administration is a part of the United States Department of Agriculture and cooperates very closely with the Soil Conservation Service, Extension Service and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, also the State Forestry Service. All of these agencies are located in the Hancock County Agricultural Center Building on Nacale Avenue in Bay St. Louis.

We wish to express our compliments to the members of the soil conservation District in this area.

We think they are doing a good job and hope they can continue their efforts in order to maintain the progress they have made.

CONSERVATION CREED

"As a soil conservationist, I believe God created the earth by His divine processes for the benefit of man; not one man, nor one generation, but mankind for all time.

"I believe the Almighty gave man an inheritance of the earth, not to be hoarded as a miser guards his treasure, but to be used with wisdom and in the fullest for the perpetual benefit of all men.

"I believe all of mankind, regardless of race or creed, are entitled to a fair and equitable share of the earth's bounty commensurate with their own efforts. But in so believing, I hold the irrevocable conviction that man himself owes earth a debt of respect and reality.

"I believe that whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap; that he who manages pastures, woodlands, and streams with wisdom shall reap the bountiful harvest of his descendants; while he who uses the land thinking of his own immediate gain, grieves his land, himself, and his children.

"Holding these beliefs to be true I devote myself to the task of helping my fellow men their own personal responsibility in conservation of the earth for the generations which follow. To this end I shall devote my best knowledge and the efforts of those who till the soil so that which nurtures us shall be fruitful without ceasing.

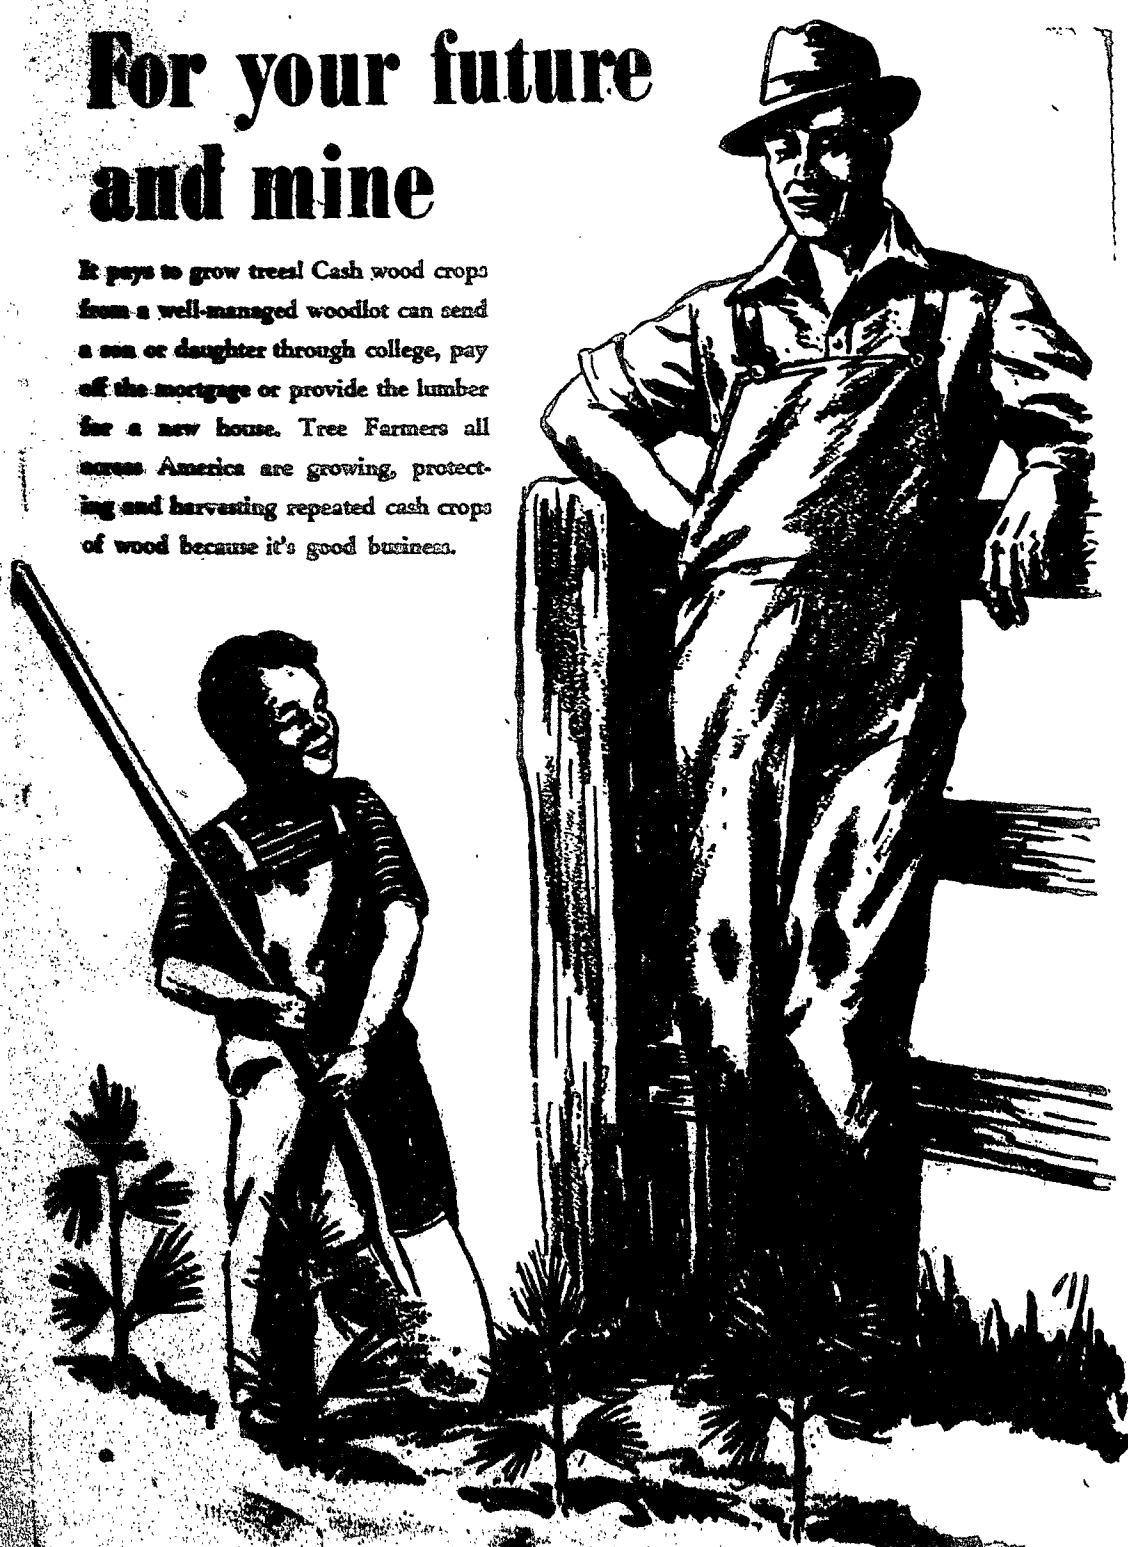

"For truly, the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, but the responsibility of its use is vested in man."

any committee of the amount of cost-sharing that will be approved for each practice and notify the farmer in writing. Probably for 1954 the same will be true as has been the case in some preceding years—the amount of funds available for helping farmers will not be sufficient to enable the county committee to approve the total amount of help requested by each farmer; therefore, the amount of assistance approved for individual farmers and individual practices is the amount shown on the written approval of assistance that will be mailed after the county committee has considered all of the requests for each sign-up period.

Farmers may obtain assistance through this program by one of two methods. The first method is that where the farmer purchases seed, fertilizer, or other materials and carries out an approved practice. If the farmer has secured a written approval from the county committee for this practice, he is eligible for a check reimbursing him for the Government's share of the practice.

The second and most popular method with farmers in Hancock County concerns assistance advanced through purchase order. This purchase order is an arrangement under which materials such as seed, fertilizer, or services like constructing stock ponds are furnished to farmers through local trade channels by seed dealers, stock pond vendors, etc. The county committee issues the purchase order for the material or service to the farmer and he takes this order to an eligible dealer.

An eligible dealer is one who has indicated that he will fill purchase orders at a price not in excess of the price established by the county committee as a fair price. The payment to be made by the Government on a purchase order represents only the

TIMBER AND GOOD MANAGEMENT EQUALS SUSTAINED YIELD

Today the timberlands of Hancock County are returning an ever-larger yield. Wood processors are on a constant lookout for tracts of pine timber to cut. The demand for lumber and forest products is at a new peak.

That tract of timber needs consideration and care. It needs to be farmed just as you farm the rest of your lands. Farming the timber will result in faster growth which means more revenue and also a higher allowable cut. But what is forest management? Forest management is: (1) Preventing and suppressing controlled fires, (2) Planting pine seedlings, (3) Thinning crowded timber, (4) Selective harvesting, (5) management for continuous yield. These steps make for forest management. These are very much like people. No two trees are exactly alike. They are born, grow, reproduce and then die. They vary in heights, diameter, and growth. Some are susceptible to disease and wind damage; some are not.

These are the reasons for selective marking of the trees to be cut. The over-topped, slow growing, poor-risk trees are removed from the timber. The taller, thrifty trees are left to continue growing at a faster rate than before. The growth each year can be increased from a present 200 board feet per acre to 400 board feet per acre. This is considering pine stands 10 inches in diameter and larger. There are a good number of pine timbers being cut today with no attention paid to the future of the timber. Most of the pine is removed and the remaining trees are hardwoods. These hardwoods are slow growing and have very poor quality. Areas such as these are in the need of prompt attention. If action in controlling the hardwoods is taken, these areas can be turned back into productive pine timber land. Most of this could be done away with by marking the pine trees to be cut and by leaving adequate trees to re-seed the area.

The whole solution to timber management centers around the landowners' desire to continue to and larger.

have a steady pine timber on a perpetual basis. Under good management this can be accomplished, and the rate of return will be increased at the same time.

Forest management can influence the entire economy of this county. A continuous yield of timber products will mean more income for the landowner and will create more jobs in the wood-using industries. This will mean a more prosperous community and county. The Mississippi Forestry Commission's area forester, who is located in the Agricultural Center Building, Bay St. Louis, Mississippi is always glad to help you at anytime.

The A B C's of FIRE PREVENTION

Wherever you go in the woods, whatever you do there, always remember: one careless act—one lapse of memory—can start a fire and burn a forest. If you smoke, use an ash tray. Never throw away a lighted cigarette or an unbroken match. If you have a campfire, always put it out—drown it! Know the fire laws and obey them. Fire prevention is your job as a good American citizen.

We cooperate with Soil Conservation Districts in the conservation of our National Resources.

Woods Fire Causes Bad Management

It is a foregone conclusion that there will continue to be the battle between good and bad timber management. With an alerted public sentiment, his measure can be brought under control or reduced to a minimum.

The question arises—who is responsible for these fires? The answer grows that man's carelessness must continue to lead all other causes. When it is realized what our forest mean to the economy in our county, it isn't a complaint to our people to destroy the raw material so vital to the welfare of all our people.

This season of the year brings on added hazards to our future forests. A large number of fires will be started by careless campers and other outdoor individuals leaving their fires unattended and not taking other necessary precautions in preventing the fire spreading.

There are still a few farmers who burn their woods for mistaken reasons such as: to provide early grazing for cattle, kill ticks, snakes, etc. Would you burn off a pasture that you had spent hundreds of dollars to develop? Or would you burn down your corn crib to destroy the rats in your corn? By the same reasoning you are being inconsistent in burning the woods for the above mentioned reasons.

The Mississippi Forestry Commission is cooperating with fifty-two counties of the State in an intensive forest fire control program, among which Hancock County is included. In these counties, towers, mechanical equipment, hand tools and two-way radios are used by trained personnel to detect and suppress wild fires. They need and solicit your cooperation.

There are a few people who continue to be a menace to your forest and to the safety of your homes. These individuals deliberately set fire for spite or for malice. The responsibility for creating an atmosphere in which such a person would be uncomfortable is yours. A good citizen respects the rights of others. Burning the woods is not becoming to a good citizen.

A productive Hancock County forest means jobs for Hancock County people. Uncontrolled forest fires will no allow our forests to be productive.

Basic Resources Build State

by JAMES BISHOP, Soil Conservationist

Our State can truly be proud of the progress it is making through intelligent use of our basic resources—soil and water.

Today there are 48,000 Mississippi farmers are following complete plans for soil and water conservation on more than 8 million acres of land. In the 16 years since the Mississippi Soil Conservation District Law was passed, we have seen contour farming begun on more than one million acres, pasture improvement on more than another million acres, woodland management on 300,000 acres, and crop rotation on well over 1,500,000 acres. And each more than 350 more farmers are helped by the Soil Conservation Service of Mississippi to develop new plans.

To make the best use of our water, 37,268 farm ponds and 12,000 miles of drainage ditches have been built. Flood prevention programs are well under way in the northeastern part of the state.

Mississippi has 66 percent of its 19,500,000 acres of forest land under organized protection, including fire control, according to reports from the Mississippi Forest Service. More scientific harvesting of timber is practiced, and Mississippi is a leader in tree planting.

Conservation is more than the farmer's problem. Every business or industrial group in Mississippi is either directly or indirectly dependent upon the soil and its products for its existence. Churches, schools, sportsmen, all have a stake in soil improvement. Conservation is taught in vocational agricultural courses and to 4-H and FFA Club Members.

By the continuance of such cooperation, Mississippi can preserve these natural resources so vital to its people's health and prosperity.

When the Hancock County Soil Conservation District was first organized in 1945, there was a great need for the development of improved pastures, as there were less than 10 acres which could be called improved pastures. These lands have since been put to pasture were planned to improve pasture plants and weeds, as needed for improved grazing. This work has continued throughout the life of the District and today many improved pastures may be seen while driving down the highways and roads of the District.

Timber Management, over the past few years, has taken the soil of woodlands and it has been found that something must be done to correct this situation. This was one of the first recommendations by the District Commissioners, and emphasis was placed on timber improvement, management, and protection.

There have been also some recommendations of complete

(these lands have been adopted to row crops), with the construction of terraces, the planting of winter and summer crops, contour farming, crop rotations and other practices needed to improve the crop lands in the district.

The need for additional water for livestock became apparent as pastures were developed, and today there are numerous stock ponds located in pastures, wherever soil conditions permit to afford more uniform and profitable grazing of the pasture land. To further increase the value of these stock ponds to the farmers, fish have been placed in them, and proper fish production management practices have been applied to many of these ponds, thus affording food and recreation to the land owner.

Another practice that has been used in the District, which also affords food and recreation to the land owner, is the establishment of quail (Bob-White), feeding plots, on the land that is better adapted to this purpose. Since the beginning of the District Program an attempt has been made to utilize each acre of land according to its capability and treat each acre according to its needs for greater sustained production.

Many of these practices have been applied in the District.

We urge each farmer in the Hancock County Soil Conservation District to develop with the assistance of the technicians assigned to the District, a complete soil and water conservation plan on his farm. We also urge each farmer who has become a cooperator of the District to study his farm plan thoroughly, and to familiarize himself with the contents of this plan, including the land-capability map of his farm. The Commissioners of the Hancock County Soil Conservation District realize that the cheapest feed a farmer can give his livestock, is that which is grown on his farm, therefore, we urge each farmer to develop a year round grazing program.

Anyone who owns land in the Hancock County Soil Conservation District may become a cooperator of the District and receive any technical assistance needed for conservation of his land. Three hundred and thirty-nine (339) land owners, covering 40,500 acres in the District have requested and received this assistance since the organization of the district, October 31, 1945.

Plans For Your Farm

If you are a farmer, you know that your farm is different from any other farm. Your land is different from anyone else's land. In fact, the land is not exactly alike on any two fields of your own farm. And, you don't run your farm in exactly the same way as anyone else. You don't have exactly the same tools and equipment. You don't grow exactly the same crops and keep the same kinds and number of livestock each year.

In one way, however, you are probably like all other farmers. You continually make plans about how to run your farm. You keep all your plans in your head or you may put them down on paper; but you do have a plan. You plan what crops to grow each year, which livestock to keep or sell, when and how to remodel the farm building buildings or install running water and electricity in them and hundreds of other details. Also you do a lot of planning about how to increase crop yields and how to protect your land so that it will continue to grow good crops year after year. When you make plans about how to conserve your land for the future while increasing its production now, you are doing conservation farm planning.

Three hundred and thirty-nine farmers in Hancock County Soil Conservation District now have a written conservation farm plan. These farmers got technical help from the Hancock County Soil Conservation District technicians in making these plans. Their main job is to help farmers make conservation farm plans and carry out those plans. Each plan is made especially to fit a certain farm. The farmer who runs the farm and a trained conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service make the plan together. They design it not only to control erosion but also to increase production on the farm.

If you live on a farm in Hancock County and want to help on some of your conservation problems, you should go to see the District Commissioner or conduct your local work unit conservationist in the Hancock County Soil Conservation District Office located in the Agricultural Center Building in Bay St. Louis, Mississippi. They will ask you to fill out an application, because the district furnishes help only to farmers who apply for it.

After the district commissioners have approved your application, the work unit conservationist will visit you on the farm to plant farm boundary lines on aerial photo map, on which the soil survey is made by the soil technician. When the soil survey of your farm is completed, the Soil Conservation Service, Cartographic Center, enlarges and reproduces the map on 2 1/2 mile scale for farm planning.

CONSERVING WATER WITH FOREST COVER

by JOHN PIGG, Area Forest Ranger

During this week I have read a report of a meeting held in a neighboring state with regard to the drought situation that is affecting the various southern states. We all know that the year of 1952 and 1953 were very dry. As a result of this drought, the water tables of farm land and urban areas were seriously affected. It was mentioned that we should secure Federal Aid and build huge reservoirs or even engage in artificial rainmaking.

However, a Geologist, Mr. Edward L. Clark, explained that the water table, which is the underground water supply, is constantly getting lower throughout the nation. The only way to bring it up is the use surface treatment over the whole watershed to produce an insink of rain and snow water and start it seeping into the geologic layers that carry and store water.

On wooded lands, such as our woodlots and the large forests of the state, the water table is much higher than anywhere else. When even, the rain hits the cover on the ground it is soaked up and stored to be used when we need it. On certain managed forest lands, lands that had been under good forest management for fifteen years, where it had been safeguarded from fire and overgrazing, it was noted that the insink in a good rain was as much as two inches in one minute.

On lands that had been overgrazed and burned year after year, there was little or no absorption or insink during three or even four hours of rain. One water superintendent reported that two lakes under his supervision which covered 4200 acres, showed an evaporation on hot windy days of 25,000.00 gallons per day.

Water underground does not evaporate. It is not reached by the hot rays of the sun and is not subjected to drying winds.

As long as we have forests, we need not have a fear of losing our water and top soil, but if we continue to denude our woodlots by clear-cutting and bad management we will be subjected to the possibility of having to look elsewhere for our water.

Without forested lands, our rivers and streams could cease to flow. Our wells and lakes would become dry holes. All of us would suffer.

Remember this the next time you see a forest fire and do your part to preserve our water supply by preserving our woodlands.

Clean cutting not only deprives the future generation of their just income from the land but causes erosion and lowers the value of the property. Selective cutting the trees in a woodlot can help pay taxes, put the children through college, pay off the mortgage and provide lumber for a new house or barn. Job security for millions rest on the productive capacity of America Forest Lands.

Dr. Joseph S. Pettus, president of the Mississippi Wildlife Federation, announced today on the return from Chicago where he spent a week attending the North American Wildlife Conference and the National Wildlife Annual Convention.

National Wildlife week, which is held each year and is for specific education on some fish or wildlife problems that effects the public, is to focus public attention on these problems and this year attention is focused upon water, better water control and less pollution.

This year many service clubs and other organizations are cooperating in the educational program on Clean Waters. The Chamber of Commerce of the U. S., Lions International, Kiwanis International, Loyal Order of the Moose, Daughters of the American Revolution, National Council of State Garden Clubs and many other organizations and especially the Boy Scouts.

There's no more sport being a Boy Scout. The fun is there, recreation galore and real sportsmanship is tops. Ask Walter Gez, Jr., who has climbed the latter of scouting and received his Eagle Badge Monday night at the Courthouse at one of the largest court of awards held here abouts. Thanks parents for the good turn out.

Watson Johns says: "Spring is Here." Watson is right according to the nice string of green trout he caught over the weekend, as shown above. Other good catches have been reported.

The Herbert Wises were entertaining the C. C. Millers of West Point, Miss., and the James Millers of Marion, Indiana. Herb took the men folks out fishing and returned with a nice catch of green trout and perch.

COASTING

By ANNE ORLEANS

Lots of farewell parties and lots of families coming over from New Orleans to say "Bon Voyage" to Mabel and Turk Carter who will be leaving for Europe in about ten days. One of the very nice parties given in New Orleans was the one at which Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Barr were the hosts. Last Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Meyer and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Carter of New Orleans and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Carter of Pass Christian came over for lunch. This weekend the Howard Smiths and the children, Nep, Lesley and Gail came over to say their farewells. The strike on the docks in New York had the Carters worried and there was a possibility that they might have to board their ship in Baltimore but as of this date, they are assured that they can follow their original plans and leave from New York.
